HAPPY ENDING POSSIBLE DESPITE TREMENDOUS TRAGEDY SAYS NEW AUTHOR, POWLEDGE PHILLIPS

HOUSTON, TX – On a fall morning in October 2005, Dori Powledge waited for her husband’s usual call once he’d dropped their four youngest children off at school. When that call didn’t come, Dori called the children’s school only to learn that a tragic automobile accident had claimed the lives of all five of her loved ones who left their home in the car that morning. In an instant, Adam (39), Jacob (12), Blake (10), Rachel (7), and Isaac (6) were all stripped from her life.

In A Love Greater Than Death, Dori rewinds that particular day and the months following it when she learned that her life would never be the same. She takes readers through the many emotions she felt when she realized that her dreams of marriage and family were shattered, and she explains how her faith in God and the truth of His promises sustained and enriched her life despite that tremendous loss.

Dori’s pain was transformed into a message of hope that she brings to others who too have suffered loss. Through local and national speaking engagements and now through the pages of A Love Greater Than Death, Dori shares her goal, her ministry born from the tragedy: to help others understand that they can be free and healed by the power of the cross of Jesus Christ.

“Regardless of whatever difficult, seemingly hopeless situations we all face in this world, happy endings are possible,” said Powledge Phillips. “We’ve all had things break our hearts. When it’s your life, there’s no comparing, and the hurt and loss you feel are as important as anyone else’s. The message of A Love Greater Than Death is about being an overcomer.”
